Partnerships for Global Health

A vision of co-development in the era of the Sustainable Development Goals

THET Strategic Plan 2016 - 2021
INTRODUCTION

Welcome to THET’s 2016 – 2021 Strategic Plan.

This is the document we will refer to as we contribute to the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Devised over six months, in consultation with Trustees, staff and partners in the UK and overseas, the strategy describes our special relationship with colleagues in the UK National Health Service (NHS) and beyond, and our model of health partnerships.

Above all, it shares our passion for the contribution health workers are making at home in the UK and in some of the poorest countries of the world.
‘THET has been a highly valued partner to the APPG on Global Health over many years, regularly contributing to our thinking and being referenced in many of our reports. It has a pivotal role to play going forwards, as it combines its grant-making role with its presence on the ground overseas, putting the health partnership approach at the centre of the UK’s contribution to the Sustainable Development Goals.’

Lord Nigel Crisp, Co-Chair, APPG on Global Health, UK Parliament
VISION

A world where everyone has access to healthcare.

MISSION

Working in partnership to support health workers across the world.

THE RIGHT TO HEALTH

THET has been supporting health workers overseas since 1989, improving patient care through targeted training programmes. We work with diverse partners to build a world where everybody has access to affordable and quality healthcare. In the past six years alone, THET has reached over 50,000 health workers across thirty-four countries in Africa, the Middle East and Asia.

We are proud of our success, but we know we must and can do more. Today, one-in-seven people around the world will never see a qualified health worker in their lives. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates the world will need to recruit and train an additional thirteen million health workers in the decades to come. Without such a workforce no country will be able to meet their citizens’ right to health. We also know that healthcare is not delivered in isolation and that we must look to the wider social and environmental determinants of health.

‘If there’s mutual trust and a willingness on both sides to learn from each other, a readiness to adapt and a readiness to try new things then good work will happen.’

Professor Sir Eldryd Parry, Founder of THET
A NEW ERA OF COOPERATION

The Sustainable Development Goals herald a new era of cooperation that puts the aim of achieving Universal Health Coverage (UHC) centre stage. The vision is of a shared, sustainably developed world in which no one is left behind. Many of the SDGs relate to health but it is Goal 3, with the stated ambition to ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages, which sets out a vision of a world where UHC becomes a reality.

We continue to see our society’s economic and social development challenged through infectious disease. Now, more than ever, the health of one nation impacts directly on the health of another. In addition, we are seeing a dramatic growth in non-communicable diseases such as heart disease, diabetes and cancer in low- and middle-income countries.

THET is committed to being part of the response to these challenges by looking at our work in the context of the broader analysis articulated in the SDGs, mindful of the wider determinants of health, and the impact of gender inequality and of climate change. We ensure all our work is grounded in an understanding of the countries where we work.

Furthermore, we believe we are entering an era in which traditional approaches to overseas aid are giving way to new forms of development, involving new sources of finance and new partnerships. In this context, our model of health partnerships is increasingly relevant. The health partnership approach enables countries to work more collaboratively and at scale, because it is grounded in the concept of mutual benefit, of co-development and co-learning. In this new era, traditional overseas development aid will be just one form of finance that will help achieve this.

SDG 3 GOOD HEALTH AND WELL BEING
Ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages.

SDG 4 QUALITY EDUCATION
Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all.

SDG 5 GENDER EQUALITY
Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls.

SDG 17 PARTNERSHIP FOR THE GOALS
Strengthen the means of the implementation and revitalize the global partnership for sustainable development.

‘The era of the Sustainable Development Goals ushers in a new way of thinking about improving health systems, an era in which individuals, organisations and even nations work together through partnerships to achieve greater access to quality healthcare. THET’s work in this area is pioneering and WHO has looked to build upon and emulate this approach.’

Dr. Edward Kelley, Director, Service Delivery and Safety, World Health Organization
OUR RELATIONSHIP WITH THE NHS

At the centre of our work over the past three decades has been the National Health Service (NHS). In the past four years alone, over 100 NHS institutions and 2,000 NHS staff have provided more than 54,000 days of their time to work with colleagues overseas.

This work brings benefit to health systems in low and middle income countries but is also having a beneficial impact on the NHS, as NHS staff return home with increased knowledge, improved leadership skills and a greater understanding of how to innovate in delivering healthcare with limited resources.

OUR MODEL

Health Partnerships are a model for improving health and health services based on ideas of co-development between actors and institutions from different countries. The partnerships are long-term but not permanent and are based on ideas of reciprocal learning and mutual benefits.
‘The number of health workers - nurses, midwives, doctors, community health workers - has increased through the support and building the capacity of medical faculties and health training institutions by THET. This in turn has improved the quality and the accessibility of healthcare services especially mother and child throughout the country.’

Dr. Osman Hussein Warsame, former DG, Ministry of Health, Somaliland
OUR PRINCIPLES OF PARTNERSHIP

In 2015 THET developed these Principles of Partnership, which guide our own work and which we offer as a guide to others working in the health partnership community. Each principle is supported by case studies which can be found on our website.

STRATEGIC
Health partnerships have a shared vision, have long-term aims and measurable plans for achieving them and work within a jointly-agreed framework of priorities and direction.

HARMONISED AND ALIGNED
Health partnerships’ work is consistent with local and national plans and complements the activities of other development partners.

EFFECTIVE AND SUSTAINABLE
Health partnerships operate in a way that delivers high-quality projects that meet targets and achieve durable and sustainable results.

RESPECTFUL AND RECIPROCAL
Health partnerships listen to one another and plan, implement and learn together.

ORGANISED AND ACCOUNTABLE
Health partnerships are well-structured, well-managed and efficient and have clear and transparent decision making processes.

RESPONSIBLE
Health partnerships conduct their activities with integrity and cultivate trust in their interactions with stakeholders.

FLEXIBLE, RESOURCEFUL AND INNOVATIVE
Health partnerships proactively adapt and respond to altered circumstances, mindful of the need to embrace change and innovate in the use of technology.

COMMITTED TO JOINT LEARNING
Health partnerships monitor, evaluate and reflect on their activities and results, articulate lessons learned and share knowledge with others.

HARMONISED AND ALIGNED
Health partnerships’ work is consistent with local and national plans and complements the activities of other development partners.
‘THET’s approach ensures that their response is government-led and designed to answer local needs through country-specific solutions. For example, we are working closely with THET and other partners to develop a new national surgical plan, which is a broad-based collaborative effort to improve the surgical system in Zambia and rests on five domains of action: infrastructure, workforce, service delivery, information management and financing.’

OUR EXPERTISE

Our in-country presence

THET has a staff presence in several African countries. This grounds our work in a deep understanding of how best you can partner us to meet the needs of low and lower-middle income countries, working in partnership with Ministries of Health, the NHS, the private sector, and like-minded NGOs.

In Somaliland and Zambia for example, THET works in partnership to strengthen national training capacity and improve the quality of training, translating into more and better-trained health workers. Drawing on our in-country expertise, we have a successful track record designing context-specific, responsive programmes. Our ambition is to expand opportunities for partnerships between UK health institutions and colleagues in low and lower-middle income countries whilst also growing south-south collaborations.

Our grant-management skills

THET is a trusted manager of grant funds for both the UK government and the private sector.

In the past six years, as managing agent for the Health Partnership Scheme (HPS) funded by the UK Department for International Development (DfID), we have managed thirty million pounds of public funds. We also have a long-standing relationship with Johnson & Johnson for whom we award grants for work across Africa.

Our policy work

We champion the role of health workers across the world, underlining the critical role that they have to play in strengthening health systems and the wider societies in which they live.

THET engages in an open dialogue with the World Health Organization, and is a partner to governments, the private sector, the NHS and our own community of international development agencies, in the development of policy and generation of evidence.

‘The skills and experience I gained help me every day and has been more positively influential in my clinical, non-clinical, teaching, leadership and team working activities than I ever would have imagined. It continues to help me years later. I met wonderful students, staff and patients and learnt more than I taught.’

OUR 2016 – 2021 STRATEGIC PRIORITIES

Our impact goals

Redouble our efforts to train and support health workers.

Partner with national governments to strengthen health systems.

Champion the contribution health workers are making to the development and security of our societies.

Our progress in delivering on these priorities will be reported on annually.

Our enabling goals

Forge strong country bonds to increase programme quality.

We will strengthen our in-country presence in order to deepen our understanding of how we can best meet national priorities and needs.

Champion the health partnership approach positioning THET as an essential partner to NHS, academic and private sector institutions in the UK.

We will deepen our position as partner of choice to NHS institutions working overseas.

Ensure financial security through diverse funding sources.

We will grow our income by developing our fundraising and looking for new partners for our grant-management service.

Create a people centred organisation, accountable and empowered.

We will ensure every member of our staff has the opportunity to grow in their role so they can fully realise their potential in contributing to our mission. As we grow, we will review our organisational model to reflect our belief that decisions are best made locally, by those most closely engaged in the lives of the health workers and the communities we seek to support.

Transparency and accuracy through robust evidence gathering.

We will ensure that our programme work, grant-making and policy contributions are informed by evidence, based on the rigorous collection of both quantitative and qualitative data.
“Engaging in overseas work is deeply rewarding for our members. As well as bringing tangible benefit to host countries, members return home with fresh ideas, new skills including a flexibility of approach when working in resource limited environments and an appreciation of globally shared health challenges. This makes them a better doctor or health professional. Indeed, the value of the opportunities offered by THET and the health partnership approach are limitless.”
